

Brides-to-be pampered at Lydiard House ‘Calling All Brides’

Forty seven potential brides were among over 80 people who visited Lydiard House for an evening of self indulgence and pampering last week when the historic venue hosted a ‘Calling All Brides’ which was arranged by wedding specialists, Love to Plan.

After a welcoming glass of bubbly, all the visitors were able to meet and chat to 14 different exhibitors who provide the special services that brides-to-be need when preparing for their special day.

Among the experts on parade were specialists in hair styling, nail art, makeup and wedding jewellery, who were more than happy to demonstrate their skills on willing subjects.

Event co-ordinator Liz Laidler commented, “All the budding brides really enjoyed their evening. Not only were they pampered by the experts, but for many this was their first visit to Lydiard House, and they didn’t realise that such a beautiful historic wedding venue and superb gardens was right on their doorstep.”

Between the pampering sessions, Liz and the team were on hand giving guided tours around Lydiard House and showing the visitors the facilities available and giving their expert advice on how to ensure that their Wedding Day would go smoothly.

Liz added, “Following the guided tours, four of the brides-to-be were so impressed that they have provisionally booked Lydiard House for their Wedding Day. The evening was such a success for both brides and exhibitors so we are planning an evening Wedding Fayre at Lydiard House on Thursday May 9th”
